Investment Risks:

There is no assurance that a portfolio will achieve its investment objective or will work under all market conditions. The value of investments may go down as well as up and you may not get back the amount originally invested. Portfolios may be subject to certain additional risks, which should be considered carefully along with their investment objectives and fees. Equity investments fluctuate in value based on changes to an individual company's financial condition and overall market conditions. The Fund's performance is expected to be closely tied to the social, political, economic and regulatory developments within Asia and to be more volatile than the performance of a more geographically diversified mutual fund. Moreover, the economies of geographies in Asia, including China, differ from the U.S. economy in several ways, including the rate of growth, reliance on a small number of industries or natural resources, rates of inflation, capital reinvestment and balance of payments position. As export-driven economies, the economies of these geographies are affected by developments in the economies of their principal trading partners, including the U.S. Furthermore, flooding, monsoons and other natural disasters also can significantly affect the value of investments. Investments in foreign markets entail special risks such as currency, political, economic, and market risks. The risks of investing in emerging-market geographies are greater than the risks generally associated with foreign investments. Fluctuations in exchange rates between the U.S. dollar and foreign currencies, or between various foreign currencies, may negatively affect the Fund's performance. Investing in smaller companies is more risky and volatile than investing in large companies. Derivatives may be riskier than other types of investments and could result in losses that significantly exceed the Fund's original investment. The Fund will not invest more than 25% of its total assets in the securities of one or more issuers conducting their principal business activities in the same industry, except that to the extent that an industry represents 20% or more of the Fund's benchmark index at the time of investment, the Fund may invest up to 35% of its assets in that industry. Concentrating Fund investments in a limited number of issuers conducting business in the same industry would subject the Fund to a greater risk of loss as a result of adverse economic, political, regulatory or market conditions affecting that industry than if its investments were not so concentrated.
